Berserk man subdued by tear-gas

Jerusalem police used tear-gas yesterday evening to subdue a man who locked himself in a German Colony flat and threatened to kill himself and two dogs if anyone came near.

The man, Witold Grianski, 26, had held two young women in the flat earlier, but had been persuaded to let them go after a short time.

Police said yesterday that Grianski had arrived in Jerusalem yesterday afternoon seeking his girlfriend, and allegedly telephoned murder threats from a Tel Aviv hotel to a male nurse at a Jerusalem mental hospital. Instead of his friend he found two strange girls in the apartment, located at 54 Rehov Emeq Refaim.

The girls, after persuading Grianski to free them, called police; and a unit arrived shortly after 6 p.m. As Grianski shouted commands — in Polish — to two dogs in the apartment, the policemen located a small opening in the wall of the ground-floor room and emptied two tear-gas canisters into it. Grianski emerged and was tackled by four officers when he tried to run back into the room.

No one was hurt, and no damage was caused. (Itim)

Six arrested as probe of Druse 'spies' continues

TIBERIAS. Six more persons, all villagers of Majdal Shamir in the Golan were arrested Monday evening on suspicion of membership in the Druse spy ring uncovered recently. They do not belong to the large Jabal clan which has supplied the bulk of the suspects so far, but all are farmers said to have done well since 1967.

In a search at the home of one of the six suspects, police found hand grenade detonators, two revolvers and ammunition — all apparently from a Syrian source.

They were arrested on the basis of information which has been gathered since the ring was broken. The investigation is continuing.

15 still in hospital after fatal bus crash

JERUSALEM. Fifteen persons injured in last Saturday's fatal bus accident near Mt. Hermon are still hospitalized here, but all are out of danger. Two men were transferred to Ichilov Hospital in Tel Aviv at their own request, to be near their families: Yeshayahu Tsaur, 40 (whose five-year-old daughter Irit was one of the three persons killed), and his father-in-law, Avraham Marco, 66.

The investigation of the accident is continuing, but no details have been released.

Galili: Ben-Aharon's withdrawal call 'mad'

By MARK SEGAL
Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

GIVAT BRENNER. — Minister without Portfolio Israel Galili yesterday declared "it would be absolute madness to decide now on withdrawal from the cease-fire lines without a contractual peace settlement."

Mr. Galili was speaking in unusually tough terms to the Council of the Kibbutz Hameuhad federation meeting here at the country's largest kibbutz.

Both he and Kibbutz Hameuhad Secretary Daniel Rosolio took their veteran colleague Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon sharply to task for his call for unilateral withdrawal from "a certain territory" without a peace agreement, at last Thursday's Labour Party Secretariat meeting.

Mr. Galili warned Mr. Ben-Aharon that he was opening the door to a united Arab attempt to demand an Israeli withdrawal from the Suez Canal as a prior condition before they were even ready to agree to negotiations. He feared that such proposals endangered the prospects of a partial agreement for the reopening of the Suez Canal because it conceded what should be the end result of negotiations right at the start.

Mr. Galili spoke angrily of Mr. Ben-Aharon's reference to the territories as "either at best cards for negotiations or—at worst—glowing embers which can burst into flames under us." He pointed out that the Government had made no decision about annexation, and no decision had yet been made about the territories, for it would be "madness" at this juncture to decide on withdrawal from any particular area without a contractual peace agreement. He found that Mr. Ben-Aharon had "to no purpose cast a huge bone of contention into the public arena."

Later Mr. Rosolio laid down the official line of the Kibbutz Hameuhad, declaring that the Council meeting held in 1968 at Kibbutz Daphna had resolved that there would be no withdrawal from the present cease-fire lines before peace. Moreover the kibbutz movement had decided in favour of establishing settlements in the areas.

"Thus it can be said with authority that Ben-Aharon does not speak on our behalf and at the most can be said to be speaking for himself, and for himself alone which certainly does not commit this kibbutz movement."

Mr. Ben-Aharon was on the defensive, saying "we yet have to discuss how to bring peace nearer... we have to move in keeping with our own evaluation of the situation... I concede there is a sharp disagreement on this issue..."

Sapir says inflation can be curbed

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir emerged from a three-hour meeting at his office here yesterday with Histadrut Government and Manufacturers' Association officials "reassured that inflation can be curbed."

The nineteen-man committee was established by the Prime Minister following an appeal by the Histadrut last week for government action on inflation. The committee decided to meet again on February 18, while two sub-committees worked out practical suggestions offered yesterday by various members.

The spokesman for the Finance Ministry told The Jerusalem Post last night's meeting was "encouraging." The committee has been requested to review the interdependence of wages, prices, and taxes.

It is understood that Mr. Aharon Efrat, member of the Mapam central committee, suggested special taxation on big incomes or luxury goods. But it was generally felt that a solution must be found not by expanding taxation or reducing wages but through more efficient use of manpower. It was also suggested that the high incomes of banks and abolition of price control had an adverse psychological effect on the public.

Herut group calls for party 'unity'

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A new ideological circle has been formed by some young Herut members in this city with the declared intention of introducing "more unity and internal democracy" within the party.

The group includes many supporters of Elzer Weisman — who was jockeyed out of the party leadership at the recent Herut convention. They insist, however, that they do not represent an internal opposition to Menachem Begin's leadership. Some 60 persons attended the group's first meeting here earlier this week.

Israel XI meets top Portuguese team tonight

Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The crack Portuguese football club, Sporting Lisbon, will field seven international players in its line-up against the Israel national team at the Bloomfield Stadium tonight. The game starts at 8 p.m.

Sporting Lisbon, the first Portuguese team to visit Israel, will provide first-class opposition to the Israeli team in its preparation for the World Cup preliminary tournament in Korea in May. The Portuguese professionals are coached by Ronnie Allen, a former English international.

Sporting Lisbon include the Portuguese international goalkeeper Victor Damas, international defenders Bastos and Santo, midfield stars "Chico" Faria and Dines and strikers Nelsch and Yasaida, an Argentine international.

The Israel team, which has won its last four games, will include only one new face, Meir Barad, the Beersheba Hapoel midfielder player. Barad is likely to replace Feigenbaum. In its last four outings the Israel team has defeated Borussia Monchengladbach 4-3, Panathinaikos 1-0, Rumania 2-1 and Argentina "B" 3-2.

In a preliminary game, starting at 6.15 p.m., the Israeli youth team will meet its German counterpart.

The starting line-ups for the main game are:
Israel: Visoker, Gindin, Rosen, Primo, Borba, Shum, Sharabani, Barad, Dami, Farkas, Onana.

Sporting Lisbon: Damas, Bastos, Santo, Aino, Dias, Manks, Nelson, Yasaida, Dines, Faria, Taxertha.

Women start league tennis

By JACK LEON
Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The long-talked-of Women's National Tennis League gets under way this afternoon, after more than 35 years of a male monopoly in the Israel Lawn Tennis Association's league competitions.

Nine teams are participating for a start, and today's programme includes matches between the "A" and "B" sides of Tel Aviv Maccabi and Tel Aviv Hapoel. In other games, Kfar Saba and Zahala host Rishon LeZion Maccabi and Arazim Maccabi, respectively. Petah Tikva Hapoel is not playing this week.

Matches, which start at 3 p.m., will consist of two singles and one doubles.

Favourites for the title are Tel Aviv Hapoel "A," which is headed by Tova Epstein and Gillian Kay, and Tel Aviv Maccabi "A," led by Janna Schmammann and Mara Cohen-Mintz.

SPAIN'S REAL MADRID basketball team arrived at Lod Airport yesterday for their European Cup quarter-finals game Thursday against Tel Aviv Maccabi at the Yad Eliahu Sports Palace. With the team was Real's 83-year-old president, Don Santiago Bernabeu, who was born in Israel with the team four and a half years ago.

Police keep strikers from closing Ashdod Port gates

By YITZHAK OKED
Jerusalem Post Reporter

ASHDOD. — Police are on emergency alert today, to ensure that striking temporary dock workers here do not again chain shut the port's main gate, as they did yesterday. It was rumoured yesterday that the 300-odd strikers would return with their families this morning for a big protest rally at the entrance to the port.

On Monday, the temporary dockers — who have been striking since Friday to force the Port Authority and Histadrut to grant them permanent status — staged a peaceful protest march which dispersed at the port entrance. But when their full-time colleagues arrived for work yesterday morning they found the main gate chained shut. Temporary dockers urged them not to try to open it.

Ashdod Port manager Mordechai Berger called the police to intervene; but the Ashdod police chief, Mefakeah Shlomo Turgeeman, sent a unit only after Mr. Berger agreed to put his request in writing. After the unit, which arrived at 7.30 a.m., failed to persuade the strikers to open the gate, a policeman cut the chains and the long queue of waiting trucks began moving through.

The temporary dockers at the gate tried to persuade other workers not to enter the port, but stood aside after a short talk between regular stevedores head Yehoshua Peretz and their own strike committee.

Port Spokesman Haim Shushan told The Post last night that the port management had agreed to give 75 of the temporary workers permanent status, as proposed by Eli Moyal of the Histadrut's Central Committee. The workers have rejected this proposal.

J.D.L. arms smuggling case
Kahane, Paglin, two others indicted

TEL AVIV. — Jewish Defence League leader Meir Kahane was charged in the District Court here yesterday with conspiring to smuggle arms abroad for use in fighting Arab terrorists. Named with him in the indictment were ex-Ingur Zvi Leumi (Itzel) officer Amihai Paglin, 50; J.D.L. secretary Yosef Schneider, 26; and Avraham Herskowitz, 28.

The prosecutor, District Attorney Victoria Ostrovsky-Cohen of the Central District, will call 38 witnesses to testify in the trial which will be heard by Judge Haim Dvornik. The date for the trial's opening has not yet been set.

According to the indictment, the four accused conspired last August to "transport and export firearms without permission and without a permit."

The prosecution claims that after the four had laid their plans, Herskowitz, a J.D.L. member from Jerusalem, called at Paglin's overseas residence in Petah Tikva to finalize arrangements for picking up the weapons. On September 13, Herskowitz and another man (not named) drove to a crossroad near the factory, the indictment said. Paglin and another man arrived in a van, bringing the case with the weapons.

According to the prosecution, the case contained a Karl Gustav sub-machinegun, four loaded magazine clips, two pistols with ammunition, three unarmed hand grenades with separate detonators, and two containers of ammunition.

Acting on Paglin's instructions, Herskowitz allegedly took the box to a Tel Aviv customs clearing agent where he filled out the necessary forms and paid the transport and agent's fees. He wrote

SHAPIRO TELLS KNESSET: Arabs will be paid for property before peace comes

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Justice Minister Y.S. Shapiro said yesterday that although the Arab refugees states exploited the Arab refugees as a weapon in their war against Israel, the Government of Israel was not entitled to hold its own Arab citizens or residents responsible for such exploitation.

Hence it would not make its Arab population wait for compensation, on account of abandoned property, until peace came, the Minister said.

He was replying to the Knesset debate on the first reading of the Absentees Property Bill, which was voted to committee.

Mr. Shapiro said an overall solution would also have to be found, eventually, to the problem of property left by Arabs who were not in Israel today, and to the problem of property left by Jews who had fled Arab lands.

He said preparatory work had already been done on registering the Jewish property, and a special department had been established in his Ministry which was handling the question.

Considerable international financial aid would be required to solve the two problems of compensation for Jewish and Arab property, he added.

(The bill would grant compensation to East Jerusalem Arabs for property they abandoned throughout Israel around the time of the War of Independence. The compensation would be paid in long-term, index-linked Government bonds.)

The law specified November 29, 1947, as the cut-off date. Compensation would be awarded for property abandoned thereafter, because this date has been specified in previous legislation about absentee compensation, he said.

Mr. Shapiro rejected the charge that the compensation proposed did not allow for subsequent rises in the value of the abandoned property. He said all countries followed the principle, in matters of expropriation of property, that allowance be made for the value at the time of expropriation. Other countries did not allow for rises in value after, or as a result of, the expropriation, he said, quoting American and French law in particular. The Arab states which expropriated European-owned property in recent years awarded compensation for considerably less than the value of the property, he said.

The law would enable applications for compensation to be submitted by Arabs who were erroneously registered in East Jerusalem at the time of the 1967 census, but whose addresses were in fact a few yards over the municipal border, in the territories, he said.

Voting for the bill were the Coalition members and several of the Opposition factions. But the New Communists, the Communists, and Independent Shalom Cohen voted against it; Ha'olam Hazei abstained.

26 Vilna Jews say mail from Israel withheld

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Twenty-six Jews from Vilna have protested to the International Postal Union that the Soviet authorities have been withholding mail sent to them from Israel. It was reported in Jerusalem yesterday.

Communications Minister Shimon Peres yesterday received a copy of the signed letter which the 26 had sent to the international organization. Another copy was sent to the Lithuanian Minister of Posts.

The Jews wrote that each one of them had definite proof that letters addressed to him from Israel had been intercepted by the Soviet authorities. This was a violation of international postal agreements, they said, and appealed to the Union to investigate the matter.

Arson at J'lem missionary bookshop

Jerusalem Post Reporter

A missionary centre on the Mount of Olives was yesterday attacked by a group of unidentified assailants who set fire to and destroyed its contents — mainly copies of the New Testament.

Preliminary investigation by Jerusalem police revealed that the arson was carried out by a group of five to seven persons who had entered the centre around noon as "visitors." They used a kerosene stove which was inside the place to set the books on fire.

The Jerusalem police spokesman, Sgan-Nitzav Avraham Turgeeman, last night told The Jerusalem Post that a special team of officers had been set up to investigate the incident.

S/N Turgeeman said police suspected the militant Jewish Defence League.

In last night's Alignment Knesset caucus, chairman Moshe Baran said he would approach Prime Minister Golda Meir for a Cabinet discussion of the "grave problem" of Christian missionary activity. Mr. Baran said he was under great pressure from the National Religious Party and Gahal Knesset factions to air the issue openly in the Knesset. He said he had withstood the pressure so far only by stressing the extensive political repercussions which could follow a debate on the subject.

Interior Committee chairman Mordechai Surkis said his committee had been holding off drafting recommendations on the missionary issue at the request of the Foreign Ministry.

Dynamite found hidden on Egypt ship in Cyprus

NICOSIA (AP). — Police yesterday announced the discovery of an undeclared cargo of 120 tons of dynamite aboard an Egyptian ship, the Sabrin, which ran aground near the entrance to Famagusta harbour in East Cyprus during the night.

The discovery immediately revived charges by the opposition press of Arab involvement in the near civil war between Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios and the armed underground of General George Grivas.

The pro-Grivas newspaper "Mesimvri" claimed the cargo — a combined motor and salt cargo vessel — was "transporting a whole cargo of weapons and dynamite for Makarios' supporters."

The cargo with its five-man Egyptian crew was towed into Famagusta harbour and is under police guard pending investigations, the police statement said. It added the Sabrin ran aground about three kms. from Famagusta harbour last night, and that one of its crewmen swam ashore to seek help from a nearby Cyprus army camp.

The ship's papers listed a cargo of carpets and furniture destined for Famagusta, but a cargo of about 120 tons of dynamite, found aboard after the vessel was towed to port, was not listed, the statement added.

The ship's captain claimed the dynamite was destined for Syria, the statement said.

According to its documents, the Sabrin was headed for Famagusta from Alexandria.

According to eyewitnesses, something was thrown overboard from the Sabrin last night, before it ran aground; the police statement said. The ship's captain said this was a barrel of water cast off to lighten the vessel.

Two weeks ago the Makarios and Grivas factions on the island engaged in a heated argument over alleged involvement by the Arabs on Makarios' side and the Israelis on Grivas' side. This followed the death of the Fatah representative on the island, Bashir Abu Khair, who was blown up in his Nicosia hotel room on January 24.

Pro-Grivas papers claimed Abu Khair had come to Cyprus with other Fatah men to help Makarios' supporters and that he blew himself up accidentally while handling his own bombs.

Makarios himself said police believe the Fatah man was murdered. The pro-Makarios side claimed Abu Khair was murdered by Zionist agents, "helped by local collaborators," and denied any Fatah involvement in the Cyprus situation.

3 fire bombs hurled near Lambeth Palace

LONDON (UPI). — Three fire bombs were hurled into the grounds of Lambeth Palace, home of the Archbishop of Canterbury, on Monday night, police said yesterday.

One smashed through the bedroom window of a staff cottage and burst into flames, setting fire to furniture and bedding, police said. Two failed to ignite.

"The three bombs were thrown over a high wall," said the Archbishop's press secretary. "Whoever did it couldn't have seen what they were aiming at."

"This is the third incident in the last two weeks. Little damage has been caused."

The cottage hit is in the same row as one given rent-free by the Archbishop to a young Ugandan Asian refugee couple who arrived in Britain last year.

Neighbours said the couple had received poison pen letters. But the couple's cottage was well away from the one hit, they said.

NICOSIA EXPLOSION (Reuters). — A dynamite bomb exploded on Monday night outside the house of Dr. Herodotus Nicolaides, a deputy in the House of Representatives, causing damage but no injuries, police reported.

It was the first reported attack on an elected member of the House of Representatives, but several other bombs have damaged the homes of police officers in the past few weeks.

L-BOMB BLAST (Reuters). — A letter-bomb exploded at Florence railway station Monday night when postal workers threw a sack of mail onto a platform after unloading it from a train.

There was a short burst of flame, but no one was injured and only slight damage was caused to a few other letters in the sack.

The letter-bomb, mailed yesterday from a small town near Siena to a Milan postal box number, was the third found in recent weeks by postal workers here.

India fears Arab terror at embassies (UPI). — The government yesterday posted guards outside the embassies of the U.S., West Germany, the Netherlands, and the British High Commission following information of a planned attack by Palestinian terrorists.

India 250 for 4 in final Test (AP). — Farook Engineer's 121, his team's first century of the series, led India to a comfortable opening-day total of 250 for the loss of four wickets yesterday in the final Cricket Test of England's India tour.

With India still batting and holding six wickets the prospect of a draw emerged, which would give the home team a victory in the five-match series. India currently leads, 2-1 with one draw.

Monk who nabbed girl, 15, saved from jail (AP). — A monk who abandoned his vows and abducted a 15-year-old girl was saved from jail on Monday — on the plea of the girl's mother.

John Hosty, 35, pleaded guilty to abduction and to unlawful intercourse. The age of consent in Britain is 16.

Judge Joseph Cantley told him: "I was going to send you to jail." But the judge said he would be lenient after the girl's mother said she would not oppose the couple getting married.

Judge Cantley placed Hosty on probation for two years with two conditions — that he does not see the girl until she is 18, and that he does not write to her without her mother's permission. If he breaks the conditions, he will go to jail, the judge said.

Prosecutor John Burke said Hosty and the girl made love at the school where he worked as a nurse. Then he abducted her to Ireland.

Defence attorney Hubert Andrew said Hosty had taken a vow of chastity and had no sexual experience before meeting the girl. "It was a meeting of two innocent people," he said.

JUDGE SOLVES JIGSAW WILL (UPI). — Mr. Justice Sir Robert Megarry adjusted his grey curled wig and spent an hour in his High Court chambers on Monday doing a jigsaw puzzle.

He was working with fragments of the last will of Mrs. Gertrude Aynsley, handed to him by attorneys for her estate's executors. Mrs. Aynsley ripped the will in pieces just before she died.

Sir Robert assembled all the pieces himself, then returned to court and declared the will valid.

California mass murderer gets 25 life sentences

Convicted mass slayer Juan Corona waves as he leaves Fairfield, Calif. court on Monday night after being given life sentences for the mass murder of 25 itinerant farm workers. (AP radiophoto)

FAIRFIELD, California. — A judge on Monday denied Juan V. Corona a new trial and sentenced him to life imprisonment for the murder of 25 itinerant farm workers.

Superior Court Judge Richard Patton ordered Corona to serve the 25 life sentences "consecutively and not concurrently."

Corona, 38, a Mexican national from Yuba City, California, was convicted January 18 of hacking and stabbing the 25 men to death in 1971 and burying their bodies in shallow graves along the Feather River in the biggest mass murder case in U.S. history.

The judge turned down the motion for a new trial despite a sheriff's admission that he discussed the case with a juror before the panel returned its guilty verdict.

The matron, who was responsible for looking after the two women on the jury, admitted she had discussed the trial with Mrs. Naomi Underwood, a 63-year-old retired naval shipyard worker. Mrs. Underwood is the lone juror who held out for two days for acquittal and who alleged that the rest of the jury "pressured" her into voting for a guilty decision.

Shortly after Corona was led away, his stunned and angry lawyer, Richard Hawk, was also taken into custody to begin serving a 64-day jail sentence on 18 counts of contempt of court.

The attorney had argued earlier in the day for a new trial for Corona on the grounds of alleged jury tampering and that the prosecution had made errors in presenting its case. (UPI, Reuters)

India 250 for 4 in final Test (AP). — Farook Engineer's 121, his team's first century of the series, led India to a comfortable opening-day total of 250 for the loss of four wickets yesterday in the final Cricket Test of England's India tour.

With India still batting and holding six wickets the prospect of a draw emerged, which would give the home team a victory in the five-match series. India currently leads, 2-1 with one draw.

Monk who nabbed girl, 15, saved from jail (AP). — A monk who abandoned his vows and abducted a 15-year-old girl was saved from jail on Monday — on the plea of the girl's mother.

John Hosty, 35, pleaded guilty to abduction and to unlawful intercourse. The age of consent in Britain is 16.

Judge Joseph Cantley told him: "I was going to send you to jail." But the judge said he would be lenient after the girl's mother said she would not oppose the couple getting married.

Judge Cantley placed Hosty on probation for two years with two conditions — that he does not see the girl until she is 18, and that he does not write to her without her mother's permission. If he breaks the conditions, he will go to jail, the judge said.

Prosecutor John Burke said Hosty and the girl made love at the school where he worked as a nurse. Then he abducted her to Ireland.

Defence attorney Hubert Andrew said Hosty had taken a vow of chastity and had no sexual experience before meeting the girl. "It was a meeting of two innocent people," he said.

JUDGE SOLVES JIGSAW WILL (UPI). — Mr. Justice Sir Robert Megarry adjusted his grey curled wig and spent an hour in his High Court chambers on Monday doing a jigsaw puzzle.

He was working with fragments of the last will of Mrs. Gertrude Aynsley, handed to him by attorneys for her estate's executors. Mrs. Aynsley ripped the will in pieces just before she died.

Sir Robert assembled all the pieces himself, then returned to court and declared the will valid.

'Newsday' heroin report Munich centre for drugs smuggled from Turkey

GARDEN CITY, New York (UPI). — More than 50 per cent of the morphine base from Turkey is smuggled along a "northwest passage" that leads through eastern Europe to Munich, the Long Island newspaper "Newsday" in its series, "The Heroin Trail," said yesterday.

According to "Newsday," the northern route has, since the mid '60s, largely replaced the old smuggler's trail through Syria and Lebanon to the heroin laboratories in southern France. The article said the old route relied on boats to make the final leg of the trip, and French authorities are now particularly alert to contraband coming through their ports.

"Newsday" said Munich serves as an ideal stopover place for morphine base because the city is the centre of a large network of smuggling highways leading throughout Europe. Thus emergency calls for morphine base from Marseille, for instance, can be filled quickly and easily, the article says.

The article, based on interviews with two big-time smugglers operating out of Bulgaria, said it is virtually impossible to restrict the flow of drugs across the Continent, because border guards are notoriously corrupt and smuggling techniques are ingeniously clever.

"Newsday" quoted the head of the Austrian narcotics control programme saying, "If we get information that a car or truck is carrying morphine base, we will stop it at the border and make a search."

But without information, it's an impossible task. (In Ankara, a member of the Turkish Parliament named in the "Newsday" story denied reports that he is involved in any way in the morphine base from Turkey.)

Chill, an independent deputy in the southern province of Hatay, named as a major opium dealer by the paper.

"My conscience is clear. My claim is false. I will take advantage of my legal rights," Chill told newspapermen.

U.S. Gov't finds 'Ms.' acceptable

WASHINGTON (AP). — The U.S. Government says the list of acceptable prefixes for use in all government publications includes "Ms.," identifying it as "an optional feminine title without marital designation."

And, should she or other women not object, it could apply to Mrs. Nixon as well as Ms. Arnesen.

The acceptance is included in the revised edition of the Government Printing Office's style book, effective later this month.

Generally pronounced "miz," the term has been used for at least three decades by direct-mail advertisers and persons sending bills to avoid mislabelling "Mrs." or "Miss."

But Robert Kling, special assistant to the G.P.O. public printer, says "grammarians are still wrestling with the term."

"It's not a true abbreviation," he said. "It has no spelled-out form, no accepted pronunciation, no plural and no foreign-language counterpart."

Women's liberationists began working in mid-1970 to popularize the term.

"A man is just 'Mr.' and it's a body's business whether he's married or not," said Joanne Edgar, editor of "Ms." Magazine. "Why should women be forced to proclaim their marital status? It's a downright invasion of privacy."

Australian draft for extradition (Reuters). — The Australian Government yesterday proved draft legislation for new extradition treaties with Israel, Austria, West Germany and Sweden to the Attorney-General's Department.

A spokesman said arrangements would be made to have the draft treaties signed and tabled when Parliament began later this month.

Stennis' condition getting worse

WASHINGTON (UPI). — Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss.) who was shot and robbed a week ago, underwent emergency surgery yesterday. A hospital spokesman said his condition had worsened.

The 45-minute operation was undertaken because doctors became concerned about a possible blockage of veins in the small intestine. None was found but there was some congestion and inflammation.

A spokesman said, "this additional surgery has resulted in a worsening of his condition. He remains very seriously ill and the prognosis is considered grave."

The use of the term "grave" for the 71-year-old senator's condition was a change from earlier statements using the word "guarded."

Judge orders 10-day delay on F.A.A. ruling Armed guards start airport duty in U.S. anti-hijack bid

NEW YORK (AP). — Armed guards went on duty at some airports around the U.S. yesterday, but were withheld at others following a court order that delays new anti-hijack measures.

A federal judge in Washington ordered a 10-day delay in enforcement of the new security measures on Monday. Judge John Smith ordered a delay until February 15 and set a hearing for February 18 on whether to make his injunction permanent.

The judge issued his ruling after the Federal Aviation Administration asked earlier on Monday to extend its midnight deadline for compliance with its rule that airports provide armed guards.

Dead Arab was attacked earlier

JOSE (AP). — An Arab whose dead body was discovered in a pool of blood near the Colosseum in Rome Monday was reportedly found in the same manner and place as Friday.

The police said that a witness reported on Monday night that he had found the man, identified as "Yusef" Yacoub, Kameh, 51, from Cairo, at a short distance from the Colosseum with his hands and feet bound. The witness, whose name was not made known, said he Egyptian told him he had been attacked by two youths who made off with his wallet. The witness said he released Kameh and found him unharmed.

The police said the Egyptian had already reported to the authorities a Milan early in January the theft of his wallet, passport, $600, and $1,500.

Chicago Mayor Richard Daley called his order for extra police security at the city's O'Hare and Midway airports after learning of the ruling. Earlier in the day, he had ordered formation of two security teams consisting of 43 men at O'Hare and 25 men at Midway.

Police in San Francisco also cancelled an order for policemen to take over extra security. A spokesman said the unit "will be held in abeyance for the next eight days."

F.A.A. officials stressed that the ruling did not have any bearing on current airport security regulations, including an earlier F.A.A. requirement that all hand-luggage be searched.

The F.A.A. said following Smith's ruling that its nine regional offices would decide whether to post airport guards or wait until the February 13 hearing.

EXTRA MEN

John M. Cyrold, F.A.A. central region director in Kansas City, said his office was encouraging all airports to keep the extra men on duty. "The injunction has been sought by the Airport Operators Council International, representing 132 airports. It filed the motion for the injunction on January 26, asking for a six-month postponement, claiming many airports needed the time to hire and train the additional officers."

The F.A.A. disagreed and said, "The special effort which the airport operators have made to comply with the regulations is a tribute to their dedication to the principle of meeting the highest degree of safety in air transportation."

Prior to Smith's ruling, airports around the nation had made plans to comply with the F.A.A. order by the midnight deadline.

Pushed bride over cliff for $968,000

EDINBURGH (AP). — A 21-year-old Dumoulin and his fiancée, Helga, 18, had eloped to Scotland. She fell 100 metres from the Salisbury cliffs on October 13, their wedding day. Dumoulin testified that his wife tried to push him off the cliff but fell over herself.

Six ex-Nazis get jail terms for ghetto murders

FRANKFURT (UPI). — A state criminal court yesterday sentenced six former Nazi police officers to prison terms ranging from 15 to 2½ years for murder and complicity in the mass murder of 20,000 Jews in wartime Russia.

The court convicted the six of helping in the extermination of 30,000 Jewish women, children and old people during the evacuation of 10 ghettos in the Pinsk area between 1941 and 1942.

Adolf Petsch, 68, received 15 years in prison for killing victims with shots in the neck.

The other defendants received the following terms: Johan Kehr, 66, 2½ years; Heinrich Platius, 68, four years; Heinz-Dieter Teitz, 56, 3½ years; Rudolf Ewekert, 58, 3 years and Walter Gross, four years.

Ex-narcotics agent with $200,000 heroin

NEW YORK (Reuter). — A key figure in the cracking of the "French Connection" drug case of more than a decade ago was charged on Monday with selling heroin worth more than $200,000.

Federal agents identified him as Francis Waters, 43, the Federal Bureau of Narcotics agent in charge of breaking up the international drug ring in the early 1960s.

Waters' arrest added a new episode to the "French Connection" story, coming only two months after disclosures that most of the heroin seized in the disbanding of the gang had been stolen from the New York City police vaults where it had been held.

His apprehension also recalled charges that the Federal Bureau of Narcotics had been riddled with corruption. Since the Bureau was incorporated into a large federal organization in 1969, five agents have been arrested and charged with drug dealings, and 40 have resigned after being investigated.

SOLD A POUND

Waters, now a Manhattan bartender, was charged with selling about a pound of heroin in 1965, a year after he quit the Bureau.

According to federal agents, the heroin Waters sold had a street value of $200,000 dollars. They said tests were being conducted to determine whether the heroin was part of the 50 pounds worth $18m., stolen from the "French Connection" cache.

Waters was charged with selling the heroin to Charles McDonald, then associate regional director of the Bureau of Drug Abuse Control in Baltimore, who in turn sold it to an unnamed pusher who distributed it in Baltimore. McDonald was arrested for the sale in 1969.

Security Council inquiry into Zambian Rhodesia situation

UNITED NATIONS (UPI). — Security Council members today voted 12-0 to open an inquiry into the Rhodesia situation.

The four countries which had day-long consultations with the Security Council President, U.N. Secretary-General U Thant, were Zambia, Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland.

The spokesman said the council will leave tomorrow for a day there to talk to the 15 Members of Parliament.

THE AMERICAN ACTIVITY CONTINUES IN ISRAEL

More than 50,000 American women within a period of 47 years of Zionist activity in the United States have brought rewarding results. Today, over 1,000 women formerly active members of Mizrahi Women's Organization of America have now settled in Israel — their slogan is: "HELP WHERE HELP IS NEEDED, IN THE SPIRIT OF THE TORAH."

Today, at the inaugural Conference of Chugim, in Jerusalem, members from all over the country will gather to report, to plan and to decide their future programme.

The Conference will formalize activities of the Chugim in Israel and will implement them within the framework of their Council, which will direct their future goals.

The Chugim were established primarily to help the Mosadot of the American Mizrahi Women, as a continuity of their devoted service upon their aliyah from the United States. Thus the loyalty and dedication of each American Mizrahi Woman serves to alleviate the personal deprivation of thousands of needy students. Their direct contact with the Mosadot encourages the children's confidence and gives them a sense of belonging.

On this memorable occasion we extend our best wishes for every success in their Blessed Deeds.

Group teaching about child-rearing and sex

By Lea Levi
Jerusalem Post Reporter

KIRYAT MALACHI. — you expect your child to wet the bed at night, chances are he will. Waking up dry will become important to him that he will sleep tense — and wake up nurse from Tipat Halav in Kiryat Malachi was talking to a group of 20 young mothers on a subject of bed-wetting. The mothers — some of whom have only one or two children, while others have four or more — are participating in a new programme of the Kiryat Malachi Women's Council (working Women's Council) for advancement of the woman and family. In addition to the two groups which meet simultaneously Kiryat Malachi (once a week about two and a half hours), the other groups around the city hold similar meetings, and in the next few months the group will reach 25. This programme is being carried through with assistance of the Demographic Unit at the Prime Minister's Office.

However the local Working Mothers' Association has a club of its own group meets there. Provisions are also made for young children not yet attending nursery or kindergarten so that the mothers be entirely free to attend the sessions. Unlike other courses for mothers by Kiryat Malachi and by other institutions these groups are not sessions but are group activities in which the women participate actively. For most of the sessions, approximately every second day is with a psychologist who uses group dynamics techniques. (It is sometimes hard to bring professional workers to distant groups in those cases some compromise have to be made with the "ten programmes" though even if it is hoped all the women enjoy the full programme.)

FREQUENT GUESTS

Members of the community who are day-to-day contact with the mothers — doctors, nurses, school teachers and advisers, etc. — frequent guests at these sessions. Shoshana Sharni, a clinical and educational psychologist who runs the programme, explained: "By bringing the local professionals into the programme at the planning stage keeping them in it all the way, we accomplish two things. We get to know these mothers better and to understand them. We get the mothers to have confidence in the professionals and to let them have somewhere to turn to a problem."

The two-and-a-half hour sessions usually divided into two parts: a theoretical — the discussion with the psychologist or with one of the community professionals — and a practical lesson in cooking, handicrafts or beauty care. For one of these groups, Miss Sharni noted, "beauty care" means inviting them to comb their hair the morning and not to go shopping in a nightgown."

"I think every woman — even one of us who are supposedly very ill-educated — could benefit from a course like this. After all, they read Shakespeare and history. I have a lot of other things, but nobody taught us how to bring up a family. People were taught to establish a partnership in marriage, for instance, maybe the divorce rate wouldn't be so high. But the point that right now these mothers are faced most by women who are educated or have very little education — women with large families and limited opportunities — women who can't cope with their problems."

ALERT AND INTELLIGENT

Actually the women I met in Kiryat Malachi — most of whom received at least part of their education here and finished elementary school — seemed alert, intelligent and really interested in helping their children. While one group spoke to the nurse about bed-wetting, the other group of 20 met with a school adviser and spoke out their children's problems and adegarten. "Whenever my child's kindergarten teacher is sick and there's a substitute,

Round-table discussion with a nurse at the Kiryat Malachi Centre. The physical aspects of growing up — including the difficult problem of bed-wetting — was the subject at this session.

tute, he comes home wild and I don't know what to do with him," said one mother. Others had similar problems, and a lively discussion about kindergartens ensued. "If they would invite an inspector here we'd kill him; that's probably why they don't invite one."

In Beisan, the picture was totally different, with many older illiterate women in the group, one mother of 16 children, and several mothers of 12. Their main ambition in coming to the course was to learn to write so they could sign the papers their children bring home from school requiring parents' signatures. "These lessons are not part of the programme we planned," Miss Sharni, who accompanied me to Beisan, said. "But if that's what the women want, I respect their wishes and I see no reason why we shouldn't give them Hebrew lessons." Until now, this group has not had meetings with a psychologist but a nearby kibbutz has offered to provide one starting in March.

ALPHABET

I sat at the table with those who had never before learned to write. The teacher wrote the first eight letters of the alphabet on the blackboard and asked the women to copy them in their notebooks. Most of the women had difficulty holding their pencils properly and found writing very hard. Behind us, at another long table, sat the younger women — who had received some schooling but who still had problems with writing and spelling. The teacher went from one to another, dictating words and sentences and — like many new immigrants — the women frequently exchanged letters for two and a half for aye. "When we started the programme," Miss Sharni whispered, "I got some statistics from the Histadrut — showing that 25 per cent of the women in Israel have a fourth grade education or less."

The second part of the lesson in Beisan was knitting. The older women who had found it difficult to hold pencils seemed also to have trouble holding knitting needles. But one mature woman — a typically matronly type — took one of the younger girls "under her wing" and taught her the trick. Then she settled down to her own knitting — bursting into song. I asked one of the younger women — 29 years old, with eight children and a ninth well on the way — why she comes. "I get away from the children and from the house and I get to talk to other women."

GET AWAY TOO

"All the young ones want to run away from the house," an older woman chimed in from across the room. "Why shouldn't we older women get away too?" someone else asked. "After all, we got married young and now that our children are grown up we can be like single girls and have fun."

Miss Sharni is sure that the group sessions raise the women's opinions of themselves. "Take the handicrafts, for instance. If they knit something and bring it home, it gives them a sense of pride and also changes the way their husbands and children view them."

Paulette — coordinator of the Working Mothers' Association in Beisan (the day-to-day administration of these groups is done by the local Working Mothers' Associations) added: "These are mostly traditional women who are very inhibited. We wanted to take them for an outing, but weren't sure how they would react. They reluctantly agreed to get on the bus and go, but said they would certainly refuse to go swimming or anything like that. But the minute they got into the bus they forgot about tradition. They sang — and when we arrived at the seashore they went into the water."

As we rode back to Tel Aviv, Shoshana Sharni spoke about the difficulties of the job. She can't be with every group every week; her visits to distant places like Kiryat Shmona, much of necessity, be few and far between. "But when you go to a place like Kiryat Shmona or Hatzor or Shlomi and see how much these sessions mean to these women, you decide it must be done. Not everyone is 'crazy' enough to go to these places; it's a lot easier to set up groups in Tel Aviv."

BOMBAY BLOOMERS ARE OUT

LONDON (AP). — It's the end of the line for "Bombay Bloomers." They have been brought to their knees by changing tastes in fashion.

The bloomers are the knee-length regulation shorts worn by the British Army in hot climates. Generations of British soldiers have put their best knees forward as they marched into battle.

But now they have had enough. Exposed knees are subject to sunburn, scratches, malaria-carrying mosquitoes and derogatory remarks from the local population.

The army brass hats have given in. The soldier of the 'seventies serving in the tropics from next year will be fitted out in a lightweight camouflage combat suit for use in desert and jungle. In barracks lightweight fashionably cut olive green pants will be the order of the day.

An army spokesman explained: "It is part of the current attitude towards clothes. The young man of today prefers long trousers and many units have already abandoned shorts."

"Bombay Bloomers" probably had their finest hour when the Desert

Rats (British Expeditionary Forces in North Africa) defeated Rommel at the battle of El Alamein in World War Two.

However, short pants and knobby knees will not disappear from British army life completely. The navy and air force will still wear them on certain occasions. And so will the kilted Scots, who have been charging naked knees into battle to the shriek of the bagpipes for longer than anyone can remember.

Disabled persons have to fight to earn living

By Macabee Dean
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV.

THE Western world has made few advances in tearing down the physical and social barriers which deny disabled persons the right to earn a living. This was stated by Mr. Norman Acton, secretary-general of Rehabilitation International, whose headquarters are in New York, during a recent visit to help make plans for the 13th World Rehabilitation Congress which will be held in Tel Aviv in 1976.

Mr. Acton said that 15 per cent of all persons in the world suffered from some form of disability, generally requiring help. Of this 15 per cent, one-third "need a lot of help," while two-thirds need "some help." However, there were a lot of "atypical" persons in these two categories, he said.

Mr. Acton stressed that despite the fact that a few of the disabled could make their way in life, most of them could not. (He includes in the disabled those suffering from mental disabilities, as well as those suffering from motor, emotional, social (chronically in poverty), and addiction disabilities.)

Even those who could work, and wanted to work, generally found it hard to find employment. For example, persons in wheelchairs could not get around easily. Few buildings were constructed so that the wheelchair could pass through a door; and if there were no elevators with wide doors, or if there was no ramp with a slight incline, the person could not even go upstairs. And even toilet doors had to be extra wide, and there had to be a bar on the wall so the crippled person could help himself to rise.

"If architects would only take these simple factors — which cost little to install when building, but are expensive to install after a building has been erected — into consideration, many more cripples could find work," he said.

TWO BOOKLETS

Mr. Arye Fink, head of the Rehabilitation Division of the Ministry of Defence, notes that two booklets, "Jerusalem for the Disabled," and "Tel Aviv for the Disabled," have been published so that persons in wheelchairs know to which public places they can go where the doors are wide and there are ramps.)

Mr. Acton noted that the physical barriers were more easily surmounted than the social ones.

"Many employers simply refuse to employ disabled persons due to inbred prejudices. They say that a handicapped person grates on the nerves of others," he said.

He noted that even in a country of "over-employment" (as in Israel at present), employers more often than not preferred to leave a position unfilled, rather than employ a crippled person.

How to break down these two barriers — physical and social — will be the themes of the next congress.

* Sweet potato treats *

By Molly Lyons Bar-David
NORTHWEST sweet potatoes were wild in America and are now grown all over the world. Even Columbus brought back some "batatas" from the USA and planted them in Spain. Here we have sweet potatoes even used for cakes and pastries as well as for vegetables.

Quick Mashed Sweet Potatoes
6 medium hot cooked sweet potatoes. Mash well. If you wish you can either add hot milk while you whip it up or use orange juice instead of the milk. Add a little grated orange rind (or just a hint of lemon rind) butter or margarine, and a few raisins. If you wish, put it into a baking dish and top with meringue and glaze lightly in a moderate oven (about 325°F). Serve it hot.

Sweet Potatoes with Nuts
Place alternate layers of sliced cooked sweet potatoes and either almonds, pecans or peanuts and sprinkle on a little bit of salt. Sprinkle white or brown sugar on each layer. Add just enough water to cover the bottom layer of the dish. Bake in a moderate oven — 375°F — for about 20 to 25 minutes. Top with bread or cake crumbs mixed with butter or margarine and bake for another five minutes.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes
Pare sweet potatoes and cut in half; drop into enough boiling water along with 1/4 tsp. of golden soup powder. For each sweet potato add 1 or 2 tbsps. honey and 1 tsp. of oil. Cover and boil until sweet potatoes are tender. If the liquid has not cooked down enough by the time they are tender, remove cover and boil rapidly until the honey-syrup is formed.

Sweet Potato Crust for Pies
Line a baking dish with mashed sweet potatoes seasoned with salt and butter or margarine. Fill centre with vegetables and left-over bits of cooked meat moistened with gravy. You can use fish instead. You can also make it just of dried fruit or drained canned fruit. Cover with more mashed sweet potatoes. Bake in a hot oven — 425°F — until hot through. If you use the meat or fish or vegetables for the crust, do not add white or brown sugar or honey. For the fruits add just a whiff of sugar or honey. For the meat and fish you can add any spice you prefer and for the fruits either cinnamon or ginger, or even allspice or mace.

Sweet Potato Cake
1/2 cup melted margarine or butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1 cup mashed sweet potatoes, 2 cups of flour, 1/2 tsp. salt, 2 tbsps. baking powder, 1/2 tsp. soda, 1/2 tsp. cinnamon, 1/4 tsp. nutmeg, dash of cloves, 1/4 cup milk, 1/4 cup chopped nuts.

Cream the margarine or butter. Add sugar gradually and cream well. Add eggs, beating well after each. Add mashed sweet potatoes. Mix well. Sift together rest of dry ingredients; add alternately with milk to the creamed mixture, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Add nuts. Mix well. Bake in a greased loaf pan in a moderate oven (350°F) for almost one hour. Top with any icing you prefer.

New on the market

IZHAR is out with four new items for men — hair tonic, after shave, a soap called Tabac and a shampoo. The MEM after shave has a pleasant menthol odour and the company says stops bleeding from any cuts made in the shaving process. It is billed as "golden rain." MEM hair tonic is reputed to keep the hair from falling out, helps avoid dandruff and keeps hair soft. Sells for IL10.60. Both these items are out in smart new packaging.

The Tabac soap, in Izhari's du Savon range — which is soap and soapless all in one (it does not leave a ring around the tub) has a pleasant tobacco fragrance. Three cakes boxed make a lovely gift.

Also out as a publicity gimmick is Izhari's plastic boat, that the children can sail all around the tub. It is stacked to the gunwales with 6 Izhari products and sells for IL9.80 — the actual cost of the products — the boat is a gift from the manufacturers.

PILOTS' PROTEST

IT is five years since Leila Khaled began her "hijack war" with an unsuccessful attempt to capture an El Al plane on a flight to London, and nearly two and a half years since the sensational multi-hijack staged in 1970, when four planes were taken to Mafrak in Jordan and to Cairo and later destroyed on the ground. No effective action has been taken internationally against hijacking since then and only now the Pilots Association has proclaimed a strike.

Since the beginning of this war on civilians, a Swiss plane on the way to Israel was destroyed in the air with the loss of all aboard. Other similar attempts were prevented by such precautions as the armour-plated hold that saved the El Al plane on its way from Rome to Tel Aviv recently, with a booby-trapped tape recorder in it. The elaborate system of searches that has been instituted in most parts of the world has also contributed its share.

Nevertheless the danger persists. Passenger morale has been little affected. After incidents such as the attempted hijack of the Sabena plane just prior to its arrival in Lod — and its risky recapture, in which a passenger accidentally lost her life, and two of the hijackers were killed — there are liable to be a small number of flight cancellations, but numbers very quickly return to normal. Air travel is the norm, and any other method over long distances has become inconvenient, costly and irregular.

It is different, however, for the air pilots and crews. The threat of terrorism now dogs them throughout their working life, and they are entitled to resent this intrusion into their profession and livelihood. The added nervous strain and relative helplessness on airlines which do not maintain an internal security team add up to an intolerable burden. The pilots have lobbied persistently for some world-wide action to be taken against hijackers and terrorists who threaten to blow up planes, and have received no help. The U.N. only turned U.S. proposals for anti-terrorist action over to a committee for leisurely study, for the Soviet bloc opposed it together with African and Asian nations who wish to ensure freedom from sanctions against revolutionary movements.

Just recently, however, some Soviet newspapers have become critical of violence employed against civilian aircraft.

Inside the American continent itself there has been a wave of criminal hijacking purely for money, and of similar attempts by deranged persons, but even Cuba, their former sanctuary, no longer welcomes these unbidden guests.

In Europe the problem remains and at least the fear of further similar actions will not be eradicated until effective sanctions are taken against the Arab states who are willing to give asylum to the hijackers. The European states have been reluctant to pick a serious quarrel with the Arab countries over this issue, preferring to pay high sums in ransom or quickly return Arab terrorist prisoners, each time apparently in the hope of having bought immunity for the future. The pilots are right in seeking some more permanent assurance that they may do their work with no more than the normal hazards ahead.

NEW DIRECTIONS FOR WELFARE POLICIES?

How to help 'youth in trouble'

TODAY may be a turning point in the history of social welfare in Israel. At 3.45 this afternoon Prime Minister Golda Meir will meet with the full complement of 128 experts who worked for almost two years on a Committee on Disadvantaged Youth, which she ordered set up following the Black Panther demonstrations of 1970 and 1971.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Meir devoted almost an entire working day to listen to the committee's division heads explain their detailed recommendations. Since then the committee's report has been circulated among Ministers and senior officials for study and comment. It has not yet been made public.

This afternoon Mrs. Meir is meeting with the committee members for a final evaluation of their findings together with the Ministers' criticism. It is expected that she will announce which recommendations she is prepared to accept.

Based on her decisions, social welfare policies may take on entirely new directions. The full name of the Prime Minister's committee is the Committee on the Problems of Disadvantaged Children and Youth. The Hebrew name mitzunka puts it more bluntly and literally means "youth in trouble." Although the report is concerned with youth, it actually touches on most areas of social welfare, since the child is a product of its environment and social circumstances.

The committee is headed by the Prime Minister herself. It was coordinated by the Director of the National Insurance Institute, Dr. Yisrael Katz. From an original 70 members it grew into the present 128.

Biggest ever

The report comprises about 750 pages, in three volumes. Committee members worked without remuneration. In size, scope and prestige (headed by the Premier) the committee is the biggest ever to investigate social conditions in Israel.

The report's seven main committees (there are three sub-committees) worked under three headings: assured income; housing and community; social services in a specific community (Ramat Hashikma near Tel Aviv, where many Russian newcomers and Israelis of Moroccan origin live together); early youth and elementary school education; secondary and vocational education; informal education — youth clubs and community centres; education in institutions for youth outside of the home.

In addition to university professors the committee includes many officials from Ministries not directly concerned with social welfare. Thus there were members from the Finance, Housing, Labour, Education and Health Ministries. This assured that the recommendations were not restricted to academic theory, but are based on the experience of men daily facing the hard facts of finance, materials and manpower shortages.

One of the committee's chief recommendations is for a "negative income tax." This means that families whose income is below the poverty line — which is computed at 40 per cent of the national average wage, or about IL360 a month at present — will have the shortage made up as a matter of right by the Government. Low-income families would thus not have to rely on welfare support only, but would have a guaranteed minimum monthly income.

The National Insurance Institute is reported to be in favour of this scheme, which, if adopted, would probably be implemented through it. The Welfare Ministry, which today spends about one third of its budget on direct support payments, fears that with this part of its functions being transferred to the National Insurance Institute or some other body, it will lose much of its raison d'être.

The committee in fact recommends that welfare payments, as distinct from services, be handled by one, consolidated agency. At present children's allowances and pensions come from National Insurance, welfare allotments from the Welfare Ministry. It is clear that the ground is prepared here for a possible struggle over spheres of influence by separate Government agencies.

In the field of housing, the committee recommends that clear-out standards be established, that every low-income family and also young couples may know what they are entitled to in terms of Government help. The guidelines — details could not yet be learned yesterday — are probably a direct result of the post-Six Day War wave of immigration, both from the West and from Russia.

It has been pointed out that this is the first time in Israel's history that definite standards in housing, education and other Government help have been established for immigrants. It is not difficult to understand why those who came with earlier waves of immigration — such as the families from which the Black Panthers spring — feel jeopardized by the newcomers.

Young couples struggling to set up a home of their own feel the same way.

If the report can set out clearly what each group may expect from the Government, it may go a long way towards avoiding antagonisms which sometimes polarize around the Ashkenazi or Sephardi origin of the groups concerned.

It has been pointed out that the rights accorded to new immigrants today, which to a poor Oriental family that came in the '50s may seem slanted in favour of Ashkenazim coming from the West and from Russia, are simply the result of Israel's better economic position and of better planning.

Powerful instrument

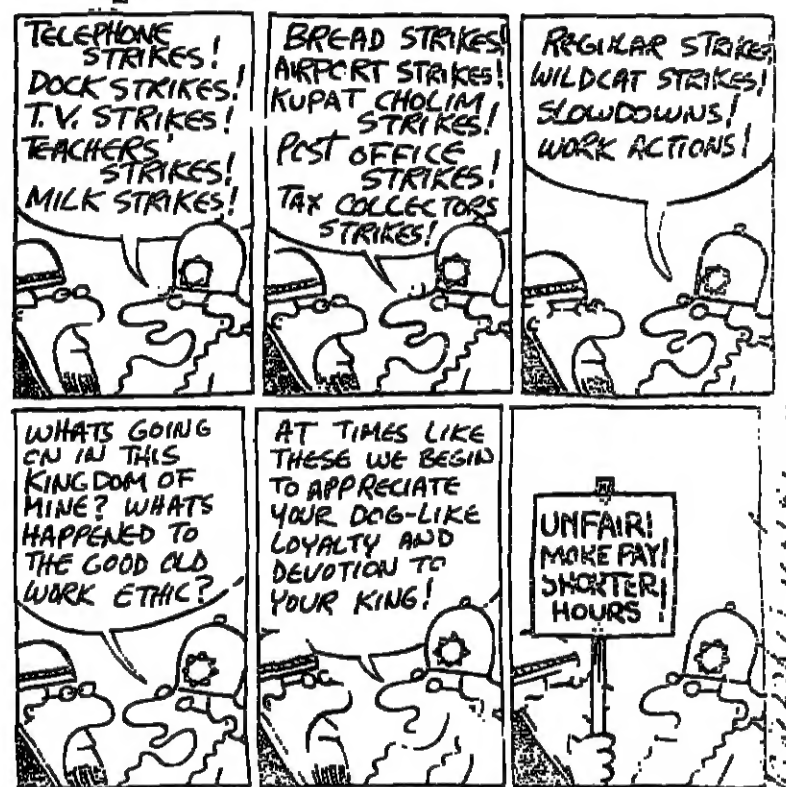

Seen in this context the committee's report may be a powerful instrument in the hands of the Prime Minister to heal old wounds. In this work she may be helped by the establishment of a Cabinet-level committee on social welfare, parallel to committees on economics, defence, etc., which the report also recommends.

Some recommendations of the report, such as increased children's allowances, have already been implemented by the National Insurance Institute. Early criticism of the report points out that the field of juvenile delinquency has not been included, that separate committees on occasion contradict each other, and that in general the report does not appear to coalesce into one uniform whole. This latter result was perhaps inevitable in view of the multitude of experts with their differing approaches who contributed to the report.

A particular criticism is that the report nowhere makes reference to the successful work of social workers engaged in work with street gangs.

If the present report can be transformed into a master plan with clearly established standards, goals and scales of priorities, it will indeed have been worth while waiting for. The waiting was done less by the average citizen than by the Black Panthers and other disadvantaged groups, who have been relatively quiet for the past two years. The meeting of the Prime Minister with the members of the Committee on Disadvantaged Youth may have much to do with preserving that quiet in the future.

Dry Bones

Immigrants aren't all bad

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir — I am a new immigrant. I am sick and tired of reading about what a bad, complaining, spoiled, and people we are and what non-complaining angels all the old-timers were. To top it off, Israeli television shows a film on Jews in America which if it were shown in the U.S. would help increase anti-Semitism by 50 per cent. Let alone what it did here to further the Israeli's wrong, one-sided view of American Jews.

Why don't you just leave us alone? Don't there any other problems you can write and make films about, such as the suicidal Israeli drive, contaminated food, vandalism, non-existent discipline in schools, etc., etc.? We immigrants aren't really all bad. In fact, to rearrange an old cliché, "some of my best friends are immigrants." But with the type of help we get from the media, it will be another 50 years before any Israelis are.

THE INFLATION CLIMATE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — Nobody denies that we are living in a period of galloping inflation. Many people discuss its causes at length, but forget the psychological reasons which contribute to the creation of an inflationary climate.

The majority of Israelis are not influenced by scientific, economic theories and analyses based on statistics. Most people remember only too well the history of the last two generations, which taught them that the purchasing power of money goes down constantly. Today, even the purchasing power of money in hard currency countries is going down, unchecked by explanations and measures of restraint.

In Israel, the workers' spokesmen use the most drastic means to achieve their goals of higher pay and the Government, whatever its reasons, makes concessions all along the line. Is there any cause for surprise, then, if the average Israeli sees no hope of financial stability and rushes to get rid of his Israeli pounds? Various Government agencies announce additional price increases for their services now and

Smoking on buses

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I have just read Mrs. Wall's letter protesting against smoking on buses (January 31). The "no smoking" rule is stupid, since at least 65 per cent of the population smoke. Why not revert to the old system in force many years ago according to which smoking was allowed in the rear of the bus?

Cairo summit and Hussein

Referring to Monday's meeting in Cairo of the Presidency Council of the tri-partite Arab Federation, Bavar (Riṣṣad) writes: "Sadat, Assad and Gaddafi rushed to meet in Cairo in an attempt to rescue whatever they could from their planned campaign of pressure on Washington — it having emerged that Hussein will not be presenting a united Arab stand designed to induce Washington to bring pressure to bear on Israel. Whatever Hussein secures in Washington will be for himself, and he has no prospect of accomplishing what Sadat and his colleagues desire — namely, that by the time Mrs. Meir visits Washington, the U.S. will have changed its attitude towards Israel."

Hamodia (Agudat Yisrael) writes: "Despite Washington's friendly feelings for Jordan, the U.S. will not be able to impose a solution on Israel against her wishes. Hussein would therefore do well to stop toying with illusions, and be prepared, instead, for concessions on the issues of the borders and Jerusalem."

Referring to the I.N.S. "Reshet," Ha'aretz (non-party) says that "the building of Israel's first missile boat is of major significance. It testifies to an expansion of Israel's military production, and to the ability of Israel's industry to manufacture complex and sophisticated weapons systems. It also limits Israel's dependence on other countries in the sphere of acquisition of military equipment."

Hatzofe (National Religious) complains about "superfluous declarations by the Foreign Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister, with particular reference to Mr. Eban's statement that Israel would prefer a state without a million Arabs." Claiming that this contradicts the government's basic principles, "which do not reject the idea of settlement in the territories," the paper calls for the creation of facts of settlement in the areas.

She'arim (Poalei Agudat Yisrael), considering the situation of the Druse minority in Israel against the background of discovery of the spying at Majdal Shams, stresses "the differences between the Golan Druse, who have connections with the Damascus regime, and Israel's Druse community, which has become integrated in and displayed loyalty to the State of Israel."

... Or Did I Dream a Dream?

THE STORY OF RUTH DAYAN

by Ruth Dayan and Helga Dudman

On a bleak morning in December 1971, the Israeli press quietly announced that Mrs. Ruth Dayan, wife of the world-famous Israeli Minister of Defence, was seeking a divorce, and within twenty-four hours the break was legal, bringing to an end a union of thirty-six years. This is Ruth Dayan's story of a unique life with a unique man and the trials and challenges of living in a young country, plagued by hostility and constant tension.
